SHOW AGRAZ DIVING FOR LOST F-4

There was a large audience present last night at the Popular theater to see the motion pictures of the Memorial day parade last Monday morning and of salvaging operations to recover the sunken submarine F-4, and both reels proved to be unusually entertaining. The military division of the parade is seen to advantage, and the F-4 pictures are of absorbing interest, particularly the one that shows Diver Jack Agraz with a smile and a bow entering a diving bell and disappearing into the water. These pictures, together with the wonderful spectacle entitled "The Pageant of San Francisco," will continue to run the remainder of the week.

With special permission by the board of supervisors, Manager Bred-hoff will open the Popular theater on Sunday evening to show pictures of "Indian Wars Refought by the United States Army." The police committee of the supervisors passed the film and unanimously reported to the board that the pictures were of a highly educational character, and properly could be shown on Sunday night. Accepting this report the board unanimously granted Mr. Bred-hoff permission to give the entertainment.

Chief Hallstrom will be present to explain the scenes, tell Indian stories and sing Indian songs. He will appear in the full regalia of a chief of the Cherokee Tribe, to which he belongs. This film will be the premier attraction at the Popular all next week.

STORY OF SOUTHLAND AT YE LIBERTY

"Cameo Kirby," the Paramount Feature offering at Ye Liberty theater for the tail end of the week, was heralded as a "fascinating southern dramatic romance." It is as fascinating, southern dramatic and as romantic as only Booth Tarkington and Harry Leon Wilson could make it.

Dustin Farnum and the company of noted dramatic artists who presented "Cameo Kirby" for the silent drama have rendered wonderful aid to the authors towards the longevity of the drama.

Stories of the sunny southland in the days before the civil war changed the entire scheme of things below the Mason and Dixon line, whether in novel or stage form, have always proved most fascinating and interesting. The son of a New Orleans plantation owner, Kirby lived for the day, and upon the death of his father, finding himself with no money, his father dying insolvent, he takes to the only means of a livelihood he knows—gambling.

During this precarious existence he meets with many adventures but finally meets with the "only girl," and the real romance commences.

The "Million Dollar Mystery," twentieth episode, and the late release of Pathe Weekly add greatly to the merit of the present bill at Ye Liberty.
